

Tib On Sinlessness

Our planet was created with such beauty and care. If not for sin we would all be living in the Kingdom of God in the space and time leading up to our individual mortal conclusions on this side of life. If not for sin, at last value would be assigned to virtue.

Rather than vacillating between some form of free market capitalism and socialism as a way of life, mankind would live holy, happy and fulfilled lives being no more and no less than everything they were created to be. Instead of “to each according to his need after a massive government bureaucracy consumes its portion and from each according to his ability after being robbed of a will to continue living anyway (Socialism)” or “to each according to the least amount the free market will bear and from each according to the most that can be extracted from him (Capitalism)” we would live in a society that would be governed by new values. “To each according to his virtue and from each according to his inspired functionality (Sinlessness)”. Social Relevance and Peace would replace all forms of exploitation and terrorism. Prosperity would be optimized among all nations and stages of life. Taxes would be so low and everyone would be happy to pay them just knowing that they were going to a perfect use. Freedom across the globe would exist in its highest form of perfection because it would be present without fear and without adversity.

How about let's give Sinlessness a chance...I'm just saying...
